OUT OF THE DARK

AVE you ever felt your way along in a dark room, chair to chair, each object forming a compass point for your direction? The blind are helped in much the same manner when they run their fingers along the raised points of the braille system of reading.

Like others, we have admired the ability with which they tap their way through traffic and bear with resignation their eternal midnight hours. At times we have realized that the blind cannot see the crimson of a rose, the smile of a baby's face nor the pure whiteness of a Host. Mostly, however, we have forgotten the blind and that black curtain that shuts out God's creations.

Now, up through the tips of their fingers will come ideas of great Catholic writers; sightless, yet they will trace the path of Christian heroes and feel the warming sparks from the Rock that is the Church. Dot by dot the universe will spread out before them, a panorama of points like ideas staked on paper, silent whispers of Mother Church that must cheer the hearts of those who have lost one of God's most precious gifts. Science cannot create nor redeem their sight but The Catholic Digest will light their minds and provide the companionship of comforting ideas.

From Fore and Aft by Joseph J. Quinn in the Southwest Courier (19 Oct. '40).

[This project is being carried out through the mercy of CATHOLIC DIGEST readers. Those who send $10 or more to the fund (copies go free to the blind) may direct us to send the year's subscription to a particular person or institution.—Editor.]
